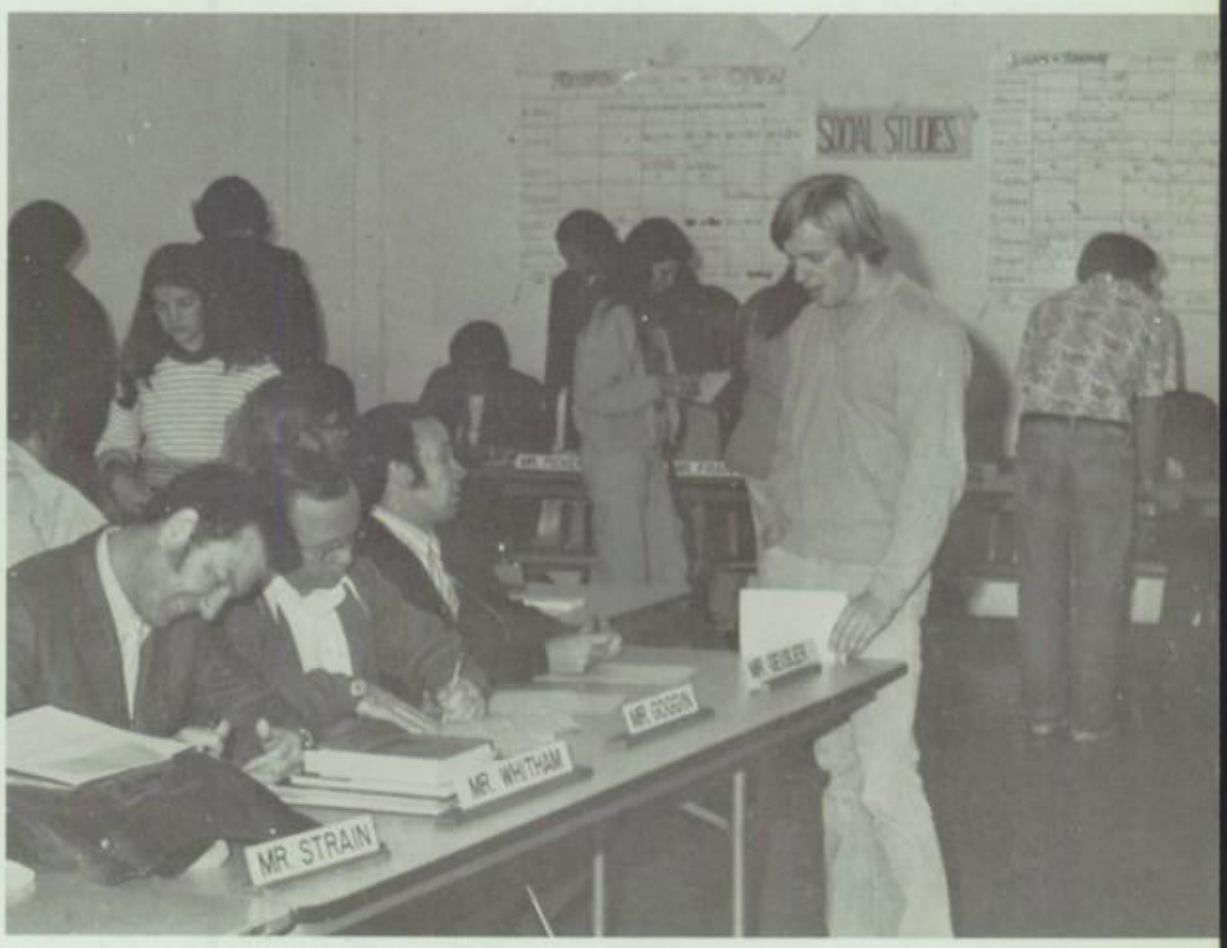
scramble

To most students at Upland High School, Scramble day is the most hectic day of the year, excluding finals, of course. Fortunately it only comes twice a year.



homecoming

On Oct. 18th Upland High School proudly crowned Kathy Fitzgibbons homecoming queen for the 1974-75 year. The members of the court are (counterclockwise) Cheryl Price, Lou Shipcott, Siri Mosley, Megan Crow, and Jana Skinner. The first attendant was Megan Crow. The court presided over the last half of the Homecoming game and the dance the following night at the Puddingstone Pavilion. The band was Motivation.

powder puff

The annual Juniors vs. Seniors Powderpuff game was held on November 20. Senior girls won with a score of 20-4. Both teams suffered bruises and sore muscles but felt the experience was worth the pain. Coaches for the Senior team (pictured above) were Bob Buchanan, Lee Diederich, Brian Fuller, and Harold Thorgerson. Providing instructions for the Juniors (pictured below) were Mark Chapman, Keith Hills, Paul Neifert, and Russell Riley. The game was preceeded by the all-you-can-eat Senior Barbeque.

season

The beginning of this year's season looked rather gloomy for our varsity team. The first few games were very discouraging. Then coach Bob Holycross began to sort out the team. Quickly Upland regained it's momentum. Coach Holycross viewed the Ganesha game as the best-played and most exciting game of all. This was the second year in a row that Upland has come from behind in the second half to defeat Ganesha. Coach Holycross pointed out such players as Jay Morton, Mike Reese, and Dominic Licavoli as being instrumental in this year's success. Upland progressed to the C.I.F. preliminaries. There we played Burroughs, a team considered by many to be one of the toughest teams in Southern California. Upland came as close to victory as you can get, losing to Burroughs 14-12. As for next year, Coach Holycross says that with our returning Juniors, next season could be the year of the Highlanders.

"America's Sweetheart" Jenneen Schiro, heiress to the fabulous PLAID art fortunes was kidnapped from her home by supposed members of the PLAID Liberation Army (PLA) yesterday.

The incident occurred at 6:45 A.M. when the victim stepped outside to pick up her morning PLAID and milk. Witnesses saw Shiro being dragged off to a car by three armed assailants tentatively identified as Monica "Slugger" Blaszak, Eric "Kid Floyd" Robison, and Jeannette "Snipely" Vance.

Tapes supposedly sent by the PLA to radio station KRAP described the PLA hideout as "somewhere in the inaccessible forests of San Antonio Heights."

No ransom demands have been made as yet for Shiro, but PLA members claim to have murdered Steve LeBlanc, one would-be rescuer of the heiress.

LeBlanc was alleged to have been jogging through the area of the PLA headquarters and happened to discover the hideout. LeBlanc then supposedly attempted to free Schiro and the unsuccessful effort cost him his life, said the PLA tapes. LeBlanc has been reported missing by the authorities.

The names of other believed members of the PLA have been released: Lori "The Biggie" Templeman, identified as "the ringleader of that unruly mob," Rich "Wolfman Jock" Taylor, Jim "Slash Gorgon" Krumwiede, and Steve "Psycho" Morris.

Dying

uncertainty lies pulsing within each beat the worry becomes pain not knowing pretending indifference
your constant wondering of when when will the time fall upon you when will the certainty come when will the world fall in around you but you can't choose the time that you want the time will come soon sooner than hoped but later than wished for always the thought always the consideration

but never dreaming of the reality never thinking of when or even of how

I bide my time waiting to indulge in the outermost limits
of pure fun,
and attending the half hallowed place
of sun, sand, and surf,
to pursue the observation
of the symmetry
of the tender gender and the right to think!

Passing By

As days bow down
To my innocence
Flowing wisdom
Creates boundaries
And shelters
In which I hide.

I'm disillusioned
By the beauty
Of living.
Allowing all
To create
What I feel inside.

Lying to the soul
Hurts the mind
Downward passing
Letting adrift
And wash with the tide.

- Cathi Rich

Reach upward take hold a star awaits
your existence
Do not fear
the beauty is real
But you alone

you deny open up touch reflections

and know you are.

PACIFIC

Gliding white waters
carry the tide
to sands upon the shore,
and seagulls laugh
as sunbeams change
my visions even more.

The ocean glistens
green then gold
and time begins to mellow,
as the sun
sinks slowly down
and lonely breakers bellow.

Can you know
the way I feel
when sea breeze calls my name, once so close to inner peace
I'll never be the same.

Soon the dark
will lay itself
upon the satin blue and I will leave until the dawn
shall bring me back to you.

Mus-
tha tha tha tha tha tha tha tha!!!
We're finally out! But I have to admit I had a blast my last year. Im glad that we got to share ½ of it together, too! I wish that you wouldn't have left so early!
But it was good that you made the decision yourself - because you seem to have "found" yourself when you left high school.
You have changed so much since the last time we had talked!! For the better
I must say! I thought that you'd never change your ways that you had always talked about - but now that you're going out with Tom you are so much more personal in a way, and you think along my lines more than ever. Its great to be able to have a friend who shares the same ideas and feelings as me.
I've had lots of good times with your family too. Espically with Rene. I was really broken when things never turned out - but that's like, I guess. I hope that this summer, if you and I and both of our Tom's still are going out with us - we can all mess around together. We can't lose contact - that's for sure.

You're a great friend and a beautiful person - so stay happy - and I hope your life is a happy and peaceful one. Love always!

FARAWAY LANDS

Give me the wisdom of your knowing hands.
Bring me the knowledge from your faraway lands.
Show me the truth about myself, and other men,
With your gift of love and life that you send.

Take me with you to the farside of the earth
Where love is valued and money has no worth.
Where the days are everlasting and the sun never sets,
On our days of forever, that no one can forget.

Like a wild flower, in the desert sun,
Our love grew when all other had gone.
Together we'll search and find a brighter day
In your faraway lands, and eternally stay.

You are the candle in the winters night,
And I am the small child shivering with fright.
My salvation came on the wind, and lives with the breeze,
From your faraway land, off across the seas.

River of Life

The rivers cool glow
reflect my yearning
and carried my wishes to swift currents turning.

Then leaping from falls
they echoed the land and washed with the tide
to lie still on the sand.

Warm sun lights beaming their colors so bright keeping them fresh with new dreams delight.

the nights, weary-eyed,
closed up on the day
shattered my yearning and drove dreams away.

"Sunshine, perfect sunshine
warm, golden peace, lazy clouds"
"Hey, shudup, would ya? Damn poets. You dreamer. You don't know reality."

"Love for people, love for you.
Sunshine, perfect sunshine."
"You don't know. D'ya ever hear of loneliness? LONELINESS?
Can you hear me?!!"
"Life worth living. Float towards heaven . . ."
"Hey, go to hell, 'poet'."

accident prone?

- Larry Short

Many people say I'm accident prone; I really don't know what to call it. It's possible I'm just clumsy. For as long as I can remember, I have been falling from bikes, trikes, skates, walls, ladders, trees, and horses. I am constantly being assailed by airborn missiles, colliding with stationary objects, stepping on nails, banging my head, or cutting myself. Once I shot myself in the heel with an arrow. I've been hit twice by cars, burned frequently, run into a tree by a blind pony, and gored by a grouchy goat. I can remember once daring my friend to throw a brick at me, just to see if he'd do it. To my surprise, he did it, smashing my heel. Once I even shot myself in the hind end with a BB gun.

These accidents have left multitudes of scars, each with its own uniquely ridiculous story, but the one accident I most frequently suffer leaves no scars. Being very near-sighted, I wear a pair of thick wire-rimmed glasses. They are quite heavy, and often break when they fall, and they fall frequently. I dread the waiting while they are being fixed, because groping aimlessly through my daily life often leaves me in a state of discord and frustration.

Up until last summer, I looked upon each new accident only as a hindrance, and something to be grudgingly tolerated. It wasn't until the experience I am about to relate that I gained a whole new outlook on life and the occasional mishaps involved.

It was my first year as a counselor for junior summer camp. All during the ride up the mountain, I managed to keep those nagging doubts and fears in the back of my mind. It wasn't until I was standing in the mud in our battered eight-man tepee, which was to be my dwelling place for a week, surrounded by eight little Indians, all listening to the rain pattering on the canvas, that I began to have second thoughts about the venture.

Since I made the ninth man, I slept outside the first night. I managed to get one hour of sleep before I had to go to a staff meeting at six-thirty, in which we were informed that the rain had brought out a plague of scorpions. Every morning and every night we were to check bags, clothing, shoes, and suitcases, but we weren't to let the kids know what we were checking them for.

One of my Indians had acute hyperactivity; three days later I discovered his abandoned medication, which he was supposed to take twice daily. I strongly suspected the others had the same problem. They were the wildest, rowdiest, stubbornest bunch of boys I have ever seen. And they were all mine for a week.

During the course of the week I suffered my usual mishaps. I was lacerated by a thorn bush while hiding from gleeful campers seeking vengeance with water balloons, received a wrenched shoulder and a bruised knee during some inhuman game I'd prefer not to think about, and then came down with a bad cold to top everything off. Worst of all, though, was my emotional condition. By the second day, I was on my knees in frustrated exhaustion, crying, "Why, Lord, why? Why pick on me?" My campers practically drove and controlled me like an animal. It was a difficult task to love them as I knew I must.

Then, in my own mind, even the other counselors began turning against me. They, in fun, rode me constantly about a girl counselor I had thought I was successfully managing to keep away from. I would even interpret remarks meant to encourage as sarcastic and undermining. By the fifth day, I was at the end of my rope, and at the beginning of the Lord's. This rarely seems to happen until I'm at the end of mine.

Then the unthinkable happened. During a particularly fast volleyball game, and with a day and night still left to go, my glasses were sent flying from my face. The ominous shattering crash and the following tinkle of broken glass announced the news before observers had time to tell me.

My glasses were broken.

Full of despair, I picked up the pieces and started feeling my way towards the administrator's office. My painful thoughts, centering mainly around the remaining time I had to counsel and the following week during which I had planned to be a camper, were suddenly interrrupted by a verse that popped into my mind: "In everything give thanks . . . " (1 Thessalonians 5:18) Somehow, some superhuman motive compelled me to say, honestly, "Thank You, Lord." I'd never done this before, but suddenly the clouds of despair were lifted, and the Lord seemed to say, "Don't worry, everything will be all right."

That evening, my Indians held a private pow-wow and solemnly announced, addressing me by my Indian name, "Leaping Lizard, we took a vote and decided we're going to be your slaves for the rest of the week." I almost cried. My remaining time at junior camp was spent in comparatively peaceful bliss, led around by Indians who heeded my every word. Then, right before I left, another counselor handed me a wad of bills to pay for the glasses. They had taken up a collection. I almost cried again.

As I was leaving the camp, I turned around and thought, "Wow, Lord, those people really did love me after all!" Through these people I found that if I am thankful when a mishap occurs, the Lord will really give me something to be thankful for later.

Accident prone? Me?

As I am writing this, I am lying in bed, waiting for a cut foot to heal. Recently, while playing volleyball — that sport always does seem to get the best of me — I jumped on a piece of glass from a broken beer bottle. I still chuckle when I recall the puzzled expression on the faces of those around me as I looked up at them and exclaimed, "Thank You, Lord!"

THE WORLD RIDE

Stop world driver, let me off. I've grown weary of this trip.
Life has lost its flavor and no longer encompasses anything for me.
The world driver heard my plea and stopped just a ways from eternity I started to jump off my tipsy seat . . .

A partially opened door lay before me. It beckoned me to draw nigh.

First quite unsure I crept towards this luminous door.
I peered through the fissure and saw my Savior nailed to a cross.
He spoke these words to me, "Come home, my child! I've missed you, I love you! You were dead but now are alive! You were lost but now have been found!"

I've only begun what will someday end.
Life is tomorrow and will soon disappear.
If we see what is there, there is no more to see.
Then life would be ended eternally.
